Johnson Leaves With Country In His Pocket

CANBERRA, Australia-Fresh from a triumphal capture of New Zealand President Johnson jetted in here tonight to try an Australian encore.

Six times in 20 minutes he stopped his cavalcade to shake hands with the crowds that lined the route. Six times the crowds surged around him cheering him on, singing for he's a jolly good fellow. Six times he talked to them over the bull horn about friendship, unity and the greatness of Asian togetherness.

Said Prime Minister Harold Holt who accompanied him: "I'm so glad you are not running as prime minister here." Then Johnson disappeared into the governor general's residence leaving a crowd of anti-war demonstrators waiting for his arrival in the cold outside his hotel. With Johnson absent it was hard to assess just how seri-

They carried signs ranging all the way from "more hus bands for unmarried mothers" to "LBJ is a murderer." Local security officials regarded many as students "out for a lark." However they admitted the issue of drafting Australians for the Viet Nam war has become a major issue in the elec-

Smothers Any Opposition

In one whirlwind day of triumph in New Zealand he smothered any opposition that might have been and left the country panting almost breathlessly that it was all the way with LBJ.

After being exposed to the folksy Texan even his opponents had to gasp their admiration and—up to a point—agreement. It was a day tailor-made to the Johnson approach. The New Zealand sun shone. The sky was blue. The kids were out of school. And LBJ in his best election campaign mood made the most of it. The biggest crowds in New Zealand history turned out to see him surpassing even royal visits.

Over five mad hours they: Blocked the streets.

Showered him in confetti Fought to touch his hand. Flung him hours behind schedule.

Local officials could hardly believe it. Said one bewildered high police official: "I've never seen anything like this. This is just not the reserved people of New Zealand. They haven't been like this even for the Queen." One elderly woman told me: "He's the greatest hunk of flesh ever to hit New Zealand."

Debate Drags On Medicare

OTTAWA (CP)-Conservative MPs were accused Wednesday of proposing "tin cup medicare" and of falling into the hands of "19th-century reactionaries".

Mr. Douglas said his party will fight in later stages of the debate to exclude insurence companies from the federal plan and extend coverage to dental, psychiatric and extend coverage to word said the legislation is premature because many provinces object to several features. ince on the desirability of a bank with its headquarters on the coast. There was equally wide concern, when the proposal was taken up by Premier Bennett, about the propriety of having the provincial government involved in its management.

That concern was shared in Ottawa, where objections eventually were made concrete in legislation denying provincial governments the right to hold shares in chartered banks, Although Mr. Bennett had made successive retreats from his original demands as to the proportion of shares the government should hold, federal authorities were not satisfied until every trace of direct government participation had been eradicated.

It is because of this very commendable wish to keep provincial governments out of the chartered banking business-the prospect of every province operating a bank and through their cumulative control being able to hamper the regulatory operations of the Bank of Canada is only one of the hazards involved -that the present application for a B.C. bank charter is again running into opposition. As financial adviser, close confidante, an official of government agencies such as the Hydro Authority, and head man of the "educational" fund of the Social Credit Party, Mr. Gunderson, in the view of many, would have difficulty in maintaining a position of detachment in the post of bank director. This is not a question of personal integrity; it is an obvious problem of official associations and the public's obvious conclusions about them.

So long as the Premier's righthand financial man and the Party's campaign fund collector and the government's high-salaried executive were embodied in Mr. Gunderson, bank director-and this in a bank which would inevitably have many dealings with the government and with private industry—it would be impossible for the public to accept a complete severance of government and bank.

The Commons banking committee has passed the B.C. Bank bill to the House with a rider that no provincial civil servant be allowed to serve on the board of directors. It will be up to the Commons to decide whether or not Mr. Gunderson is in the category of non-acceptable directors and, aside from the possibly fuzzy definition of "civil serv-Mr. Bennett's provincial government ant," it would be in the best interest is still not far out of the banking of the province if they barred any person who draws a government

Embarrassment Normal in Conventions

HE government suffered unnecessary embarrassment last week because the Liberal party conference attempted too much. This was, by no means unusual; in fact it had happened at almost all the national party conventions of recent years. It costs a great deal of money to bring together 1,500 to 2,000 delegates from all parts of the country. For this reason, among others, politicians appear obsessed with a determination to cover, in three short days, every conceivable subject and the global waterfront as well. Such a procedure almost guarantees trouble.

Western

The alternative would be a conference dedicated to limited objectives. already noted in these columns, the Liberal conference was most successful in dealing with economic matters. This was not accidental. The interesting fact is that the Western delegates who were so influential at the Ottawa gathering, came well prepared for their work by an earlier conference in Saskatoon which had addressed itself in a businesslike way to these specific questions.

Passed in Rush

But a convention which must cover everything is under constant pressure to keep moving. The plan at the Liberal conference was to refer general categories of subjects to workshops committees, which in turn reported to the plenary sessions. Some of these workshops, notably the one on economic affairs, attracted a great many delegates; others drew rather few; generally persons with specialized interests. In the rush to complete business, however, any workshop finding had an excellent chance of passage in the frantic evening hours.

From one such workshop came resolution dealing with bilingualism in the civil service. There was a good deal of confusion when it reached the floor. As passed, it called for compulsory bilingualism for all civil servants in bilingual areas of Canada. The federal capital is one such district.

Impractical

While an excellent case for bilingualism can be made out in various fields. such a resolution is utterly impractical. It would be certain to wreck the civil service. This is apparent from a mere glance at the telephone directory of the Government of Canada.

There are a great many persons in government employment who have been recruited because of their scientific attainments. It happens to be an age of specialization and it is simply not reasonable to expect that a man who eminence in a special field will at the same time be proficient in the quite different field of languages. Moreover, many of our problems are regional. A plant pathologist who is concerned, say, with wheat will rarely be called upon to deal with queries in the French language while others, in different departments may find themselves almost exclusively concerned with problems of French-speaking persons in Quebec.

The probable result of any such hardand-fast rule would be to deny the Canadian service the assistance of many of the most competent men in their respective fields.

Thus, it is by no means surprising that the prime minister seized the first opportunity to assure the House of Commons that government policy for the encouragement of bilingualism (a quite different matter) remained as stated on April 6 of this year.

Policy on Medicare

But this naturally brought into question the status of other and much more serious resolutions passed at the conference. Mr. Pearson made the specific point that the one dealing with medicare, which was defended by ministers on the conference floor, did represent government policy. As to the others, he said the resolutions "serve as a guide" to be taken seriously "but olutions themselves do not establish ments which, after all, are responsible to Parliament. This is one reason why past governments have been chary of submitting their current policies to the mass scrutiny of political conventions. The distinction between party and government policy may not in all cases have been clear to Liberal delegates, some of whom probably felt that they were offering something stronger than guidance to ministers in attendance.

This must be the case with govern- pigeon-holing its resolutions.

Inherent Risks

Such risks are Inherent in the process of consultation with the "grassroots" of the party. The results of the Liberal conference suggest that they are well worth courting for the greater gains which seem likely to ensue. But they could be greatly reduced if political parties would rid themselves of the curious illusion that the country (and the world too) can be re-made in three days. It would seem much more realistic to take a limited field, such as economic policy or perhaps federalism, and to make this the subject of a much more thorough-going debate

This is not, however, likely to happen. The waterfront conference appears to have an unshakeable hold on the loyalty of politicians. We can therefore, assume with some confidence that every conference will produce its aftermath of embarrassments, although few probably will achieve the distinction of one Conservative convention which ended by

Priceless Historic Landmark

In 1956 when Dr. W. Mr. Willard Ireland, the Provincial Archivist, agreed with his

In June, 1963, the University Women's Club of Victoria, presented a brief to the Historic Sites and Monuments Board, urging that action be taken to acquire Craigflower Manor and some surrounding land for a national monument.

We are informed that negotiations are now being carried on between the two governments, with an offer from the federal government to pay one-half of the purchase price of the manor and grounds, if the provincial government will undertake to maintain the building as a museum for 35 years.

We earnestly hope that an agreement will be reached between the two governments in the near future. It is probably the public's last chance to save a priceless historical landmark from commercial exploitation. - Ellen Hart. Convener, Historic Sites Committee, University Women's Club of Victoria.

Japan's astonishing steel achievement is no more than a symbol, furthermore, of a fundamental fact of inestimable longrange importance. There are other such symbols. There is the economic miracle of Hong Kong, with no resources whatever but now the leading lightindustrial world city, comfortably porting a population of around 4 million. There is the impressive success of Taiwan, despite the burden of a swollen army. There is the brilliant beginning of take-off in overpopulated, still povertystricken South Korea.

Work Harder

The believers in environment and the believers in heredity must be left to argue about the origins of this bewildering phenomenon. As to the phenomenon itself, however, there can be no doubt. Either something in the culture or something in the genes, or a bit of both, had endowed this particular group of Far Eastern peoples with an enviable knack of getting ahead in the world. They work harder, they are quicker to seize new opportunities, they learn new techniques more rapidly than just about anyone else

Thus far these rather crucial geopolitical facts have been concealed from Western eyes by accidents of historyabove all, the accident of the West's priority in industrialization. In the first stage, particularly, the industrial tech-nology invented in the West was borrowed in Asia by the Japanese alone. And even the Japanese were competitively hampered until the last great war by their swollen imperial ambitions.

Mao's Communism

The Chinese, as Prof. John Fairbank has pointed out, had been supremely essful for much too long and were, therefore, much too self-satisfied. They refused to believe they had anything to learn from the West for a very long time. When the hard lesson was forced home in this century, their first really major importation was Mao's com-- a Western-inspired system that might have been designated by Providence to frustrate the Chinese this has been achieved with hardly an mainland, but including the South Vietnamese, the Japanese achievement to date foreshadows a very great future role in the world for this group of Far Eastern peoples. Today westerners take them for granted, but are fools to do so.

The earthquake tremors in China, furthermore seem to presage the kind of sharp adaptation of the Communist system that will give free rein to Chinese genius. When and if such a change bears its full fruit, the total weight in the world of all these peoples will certainly be many times the present weight of Japan. That implies an eventual upset of the whole world balance that is all but unimaginable in the Atlantic-centred present.

These are only a few of the reasons why the United States, as a Pacific great power, has a vital interest in the future development of Eastern Asia - which is one of the prime stakes in the game in Viet Nam. There are other stakes in the game, too, such as the potential wealth and weight of Indonesia, the vigor and rosperity of Thailand, the promise of Malaya and so on and on.

No Serious Pressure

To be sure, the states can also be judged in another way. If the President's opponents had any familiarity with Asia. and were also a bit more cruel and cynical, they could even make a logical case for their favored policy of scuttleand-run in Viet Nam. After all, Maoist China's peculiar combination of sterility and dementia does not exert very serious competitive pressure on other nations.

Whereas the American effort in Viet Nam is one of the strongest factors tending to promote a great change in China. And if that change comes, and China starts down the Japanese road (from a much more favorable resourcesstart than Japan), the world competition is certain to become very rough indeed before very long.

But it would be degrading for the United States to let its role be influenced by fear of future competition in this vast, hardly understood drama of the Asian peoples thrusting into the modern world. We must be ready to hold our end up in the future, as we are holding our end up in Viet Nam today, while helping our Asiar future, too.

In recent years autism, a very severe form of mental illness in children, which affects four times as many boys as girls, has been the subject of intense study and debate. It still remains a mystery, and despite all that medical, educational and psychological research has to offer, the majority of autistic children fare a bleak and emotionally crippled future.

It is a deeply affecting experience to watch a group of these children, who so often are exceptionally beautiful and well built. Though in close proximity, they ignore one another, each locked in silence, or constantly repeating some apparently meaningless phrase, or carrying out over and over again a particular gesture or action which has significance only for him.

No Outlet

Parallel work by Dr. Trude Tietze with adult psychotics and their familes revealed that the mothers were anxi ous, subtly domineering, ob-sessive, and restrictive about their children's sexual inter-ests. She found that a child w o later became psychotic was usually brought up in a home where rebellion was not possible, and this deprived him of any outlet for his al aggressive impulses.

A number of studies empha size the part played by the father. An other American psychiatrist, Dr. Theodore Lidzt, for example, has shown a father can actively interfere with the mother's ability to be loving, even in the first months of the child's life.

In this context, the views of Dr. Leo Kanner and his collaborators, and of Dr. L. Eisenberg, have aroused the contention. They state that a large proportion of parents of autistic children "undemonstrative people with mechanized hum intelligent and tionships," successful in their careers but not sensitively tuned to the tional needs of their chil-

In fairness to Kanner, who has been much criticized, it must be emphasized that he states explicitly that the emotional limitations of these parents are not the only factors leading to autism, but that "these children are dif-ferent from the very beginning of their extra-ulterine

Kanner is by no mean alone in finding that many of the parents of autistic children are inclined to be cold, humorless perfectionists. They do not, he says, enjoy their children for what they are. They put enormous stress on the attainment of goodness, obedience, quiet behavior, good eating, regular bowel movements, cleanliness or cleverness. Some children do seem to react against this over-ambitious and joyless program by retreating into the unreal world of psychotic

Here and there specially gifted individuals have been able to bring autistic children into meaningful contact with the real world of warm human relationships. In order to achieve this they have been willing to watch and wait with exquisite patience until the child has felt safe enough to stablish contact.

Feels Used

In his school in America, Bruno Bettelheim has treated many very disturbed children. He finds that the autistic child feels himself to be at the mercy of irrational forces bent on using him for their own goals, irrespective of his own.

For some obscure reason the infant becomes convinced that his life is run by insensitive and overwhelming powers who have complete control over his life and death. Bettleheim suggests that what such a child needs is "a mother free of the notional demands so many mothers make, so that he ca benefit from mothering with out having to respond to it, so that he is free to respond in his own good time and in his own schizophrenic way. Only this can begin to establish his autonomy."

When things have gone sadly wrong between the child and the world around himwhatever the cause -the child's best hope for recovery seems to lie in his being offered another adult, a teacher or psychotherapist, with whom he can gradually relate on his own terms, and around whom he can create a new and less frighteneing world in which trust, love and

Church-State Pulling Apart In Argentina

By ROBERT COX

BUENOS AIRES - When President Juan Carlos Ongania was commander-in-chief of the Argentine army, he ordered commanding officers throughout the country to line up their men in the barrack squares and read them Pope John's Mater et Magister encyclical.

As Argentina's president, the retired lieutenant general cabled Pope Paul that his encyclicals would be the foundation for his policies.

On the surface, the relation ship between the deeply pious Ongania, h i s hand-picked overwhelmingly Catholic ad ninistration and the Catholic Church in Argentina should be perfect. But as the Latin American episcopal council's conference wound up last weekend 300 miles south of here in the Atlantic resort of Mar del Plata, it was clear that church and state are finally pulling apart in this continent, which was won for Spain through an unholy alli-arice of clergy and conquista-

At first, Ongania's Catholicism and his equally devout anti-Communism produced a semblance of togethernes with Argentine primate Car-dinal Antonio Caggiano. The cardinal, who is also Arch-bishop of Buenos Aires, was so often Ongania's right hand in the days following the overthrow of President Arturo 'el vice presidente.'

Caggiano was soon made to realize that his progressive bishops would not countenance an alliance they saw as directly counter to the concepts of the Vatican ecumen ical council. They were also politically aware of the danger that the church might once again fall into an embrace with a dictator, how-

The progressive first rumbling about the present situation was a pastoral letter from the Bishop of Goya, Alberto Devoto, a quiet little man with a shining bald pate who took a vow of poverty this year to get closer to his penurious flock in the dirtpoor province of Corrientes.

field trips along the seashore. Visitors are Apart from organizations the best sources of information are books and there are many devoted to the sea and its life. They differ widely in content and scope consequently there is no single publication that will satisfy a person interested in this field. Some of these are listed as follows:

"Seashore Animals of the Pacific Coast" by Johnson and Snook, MacMillan Company, 1927. I place this book at the top of the list because it most nearly answers the need of the average person interested in seashore life of this area. Unfortunately it has been out of print for many years and therefore is only available as a reference book in certain libraries.

"Between Pacific Tides" by Ricketts and Calvin, Stanford University Press, 1952 (third edition). This, too, is an excellent publication containing numerous illustrations and very readable text. It differs from the first-named publication in having the animals arranged according to habitat, not in taxonomic sequence. It also differs in being available and nparatively up-to-date; a fourth edition is in preparation.

'Natural History of Marine Animals' by G. E. MacGinitie and Nettie MacGinitie. McGraw-Hill Book Co. Inc. 1949. This is a well-Illustrated account of Pacific Coast species including most of those animals found along our part of the coast. A new, revised edition will shortly be available.

"Intertidal Invertebrates of the Central California Coast" by Light and others. University of California Press, 1954. Since the emphasis is on marine creatures of California this publication has limited use to us. However, it contains useful keys to identification and some other general information.

"Animals of the Seashore" by Muriel L.

book is of special interest since it deals entirely with local animals and is well illustrated. However, only certain

$40,000 Spent This Year In Battle Against Law

The secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Federation of Labour said Wednesday night "there is no need for injunctions" in industrial disputes.

The B.C. government Wednes day was urged to ensure preservation of Craigflower Manor as an historical site.

Ellen Hart, convener of the University Women's Club of Victoria historic sites commit-tee, said in an open letter that a federal government offer to pay half the acquisition cost "is probably the public's last chance to save a priceless historical landmark."

For Beauty's Sake Plant Now! She noted that a 1965 surve put the century-old manor house near Craigflower bridge at the top of a priority list for B.C. and the federal government has offered to help the provincial government acquire if B.C. will operate it as a public establishment for 35 years.

"It seems unthinkable that British Columbians should allow this link with the early history of the province to be lost in the very year they are celebrating B.C.'s first centraary," she

She added that although the provincial government may be justified in trying to reduce over-all expenses this year, "preserving a record of our country's history is a duty that does not belong to any particular time or party.

Retail merchandising in Victoria is enjoying normal pre-Christmas prosperity despite Premier Bennett's gloom and doom inflation warning of a week ago.

Cash registers jingle merrily in uptown stores and bank account debits continue to show a broad disregard for the spending of money.

If there is going to be a slump, merchants haven't seen any sign of it.

Speedy Clark Was Going Concern

While the spectators were pulling all the way for Smith to extend his shutout string, they were also voicing plenty of encouragement for a nother rookie—centre Neil Clark.

Working with wingers Dick Lamoureux and Gordie Redahl, Clark was prominent on both defence and attack. A fast, aggressive and tenacious skater, Clark was rewarded with his first pro goal in the third period, deflecting Fred Hucul's shot past goalie Don Head on a power play for Victoria's final tally.

HARRISON

Presence of Social Credit fund raiser Einar Gunderson in the directorate of the proposed Bank of British Columbia meets approval of British Columbia Chamber of Commerce president E. L. Harrison.

He applauded forwarding of the Bank Act to Parliament Wednesday after it left the Commons finance committee which questioned Mr. Gunder-son at length.

Mr. Gunderson has given assurances that he would resign within a year as a B.C. Hydro and Power Authority executive director and head of the Socred campaign fund.

Mr. Harrison, asked for reaction to the move that will see Parliament deal with the bank Parliament deal with the bank charter soon, noted that "com- sociate and confidant of the lit recognizes the right of petition is the essence of free premier.

So you've actually got your wife convinced that you save money by trading cars every two or three years.

You rascal.

Why don't you cut that out. There are cars that will hold up onger than two or three years, as you well know

A Volvo will hold up quite a bit longer than two or three years.

In Sweden, where there are no speed limits on the highways and over 70,000 miles of unpaved roads, Volvos are driven an average of eleven years.

Keep a Volvo just six years and you'll make out. That'll give you three years to pay for it, three years to put money in the bank after you've paid for it.

A Volvo will give you something else you may never have experienced before: take your wife and kids to performance and economy. Volvos run Europe.

away from every other compact in their class...yet deliver over 30 miles to the gallon, even with automatic transmission

And if you're concerned about having a six year old car sitting in the drive way, don't be. Your neighbors won't notice its age any more than you will. Volvos aren't given a new look every year. So you're not stuck with an older look every year.

Besides, your neighbors won't be wondering why you have a six year old car in the driveway.

They'll be wondering where you got the money to (VOLVO)

WASHINGTON (AP) — The communications Satellite Corp. said Wednesday it plans to launch new Early Bird-type satellites Oct. 26 and Nov. 23.

If all goes well, the first new communications satellite will be stationed in synchronous orbit 22,300 miles above the Pacific Ocean about 1,000 miles east of Gilbert Island, near the International Dateline.

Comsat President Joseph V. Charyk said the Pacific satellite will link Asia and Australia with North America in the Comsat communications network for the first time, and perhaps some time next year may even make possible on-the-spot television coverage from Viet Nam.

Canada's destroyers next year.

"I am not saying we will be able to, but we will be making every effort to do so next year," he said in a Commons reply to opposition questioners.

Conservative defence critic Gordon Churchill (Winnipeg South Centre) had asked why Mr. Heilyer prevented retired Rear-Admiral William Landymore from testifying to a Commons committee that "there will be a shortage of the commons."

Mr. Heilyer said he had told a press conference last summer that there was a shortage of 1,500 personnel.

"The admiral, in his evidence to the committee, stated there was a desperate shortage but that how many ships will be manned next year will depend on what will happen in the intervening months."

Mr. Churchill then asked whether it was "not right that by May, 1967, we will be able to man only 13 or 14 of the total of 23 destroyers and have those 13 or 14 in full commission?"

Mr. Hellyer said he though this would prove to be a "very pessimistic forecast."

ONTARIO STRATEGY:

TORONTO (CP)-The Tele gram says the Ontario Progressive Conservative party will put down any attempt to raise the question of the na-tional party leadership at its three-day convention starting

The paper says:

"The Ontario party's power-ful resolutions committee, it is understood, in refusing to put the controversial leadership don't show up on middle-class-oriented intelligence tests, issue on the convention agenda and will rule out of order any resolutions from the floor.

"The strategy to save the party split from spreading to the provincial meeting was mapped out at a closed meeting of the committee."

The Telegram says the pro-vincial Conservatives are anxious to make the convention a celebration of Premier John Robart's five years in power and do not want to tackle an issue that could handicap them in a general election

Rolls on your walls like latex.

How come? Because it has a latex base. In fact it's the first successful latex enamel. It rolls on walls and ceilings smoothly and evenly; dries quickly; has no unpleasant "painty" odour, and washes off brushes and rollers in warm soapy water. But it dries to a hard, tough, low-lustre enamel finish. It can safely be washed with household cleansers. And it's just as stain-resistant as ordinary enamels! You can use it with complete confidence in kitchens,

Arthur Mayse

The year in its turning has brought us to the time when a nuisancy but necessary ritual demands attention. This is the winterizing of the family car or cars, and if you neglect it even in our favored clime, you could be sorry.

There are years when the Victoriano can get by with no more than a change from heavy to light

However, if there's one thing you can't trust in these parts, it's the weather, and I recall sorrowfully a Nov. II when radiator blocks were popping like firecrackers all

Legends of the Night of the Big Freeze still circulate when the north wind blows.

Once concerns a retired cavalry major of the bulldog breed, who used to urge his Peewit Minor along Oak Bay byways as if riding to hounds. At the first twist of his groping pliers, the major snapped his ear' radiator dreincock flush with the metal.

Undaunted, he charged indoors to return with a lone, prized bottle of Napoleon brandy, warmed his own interior with a hasty peg, then brimmed his steed's rad with the rest.

He muddled through, the story goes . . . but anti-freeze is cheaper.

In theory, a car's frost plugs — cores of softer metal banged into holes in the engine block — are supposed to pop out as freezing coolant expands, and thus save a heavy repair bill.

In practice, this prudent safeguard doesn't seem to work very well, and the only frost plug I ever popped left me stalled in a cloud of steam on a sizzling June highway.

The failure struck me as singularly unjust, since I begin my own car winterizing about as early as one can.

First step is to see that the car's exterior finish tely protected from winter's ravages. but that calls for hard rub-bing, which in turn can lead to a painful affliction called bursitis. That comes from too much friction of bone in socket, and I know a fellow who waxed himself up such a case that for a week after, he screamed like a wildcat each time he bent an elbow. With this in mind, let me ecommend the system I used with my last car, a gutlest wonder with a mouse-fur interior and elastic band shock absorbers, which we bought on impulse and learned to hate in something

From May onward, I would let a patina of traffic film build on its hide. By October, this amounted to an opaque glaze, which before the first frost was topped with an even coating of mud.

Come spring, the paint-job which we didn't much care for either — was so well protected that finicky strollers scrawl a "Wash your car' on its flanks.

Around April, the boys at the corner garage lured me in on the pretext that Old Unfaithful needed an oil change and gave her a fr wash just to see what was

What they found cowering there impressed them not at all, and I was able to commence my next winterizing campaign with no further in-

It's years since we unloaded that lemon, but even now, when we see it snuffling and poking along the streets, I feel like hurling rocks at it. We like the car that suc-ceeded it much better, even though it has had its little troubles, and its winterizing is ming along very nicely.

It has a bellyful of approved enerous gulp of non-alcoholic till the next three zeros are framed in its mileage indicator, I may treat it to a pair of now tires.

After all, what better way to guarantee a green winter?

Bennett in Many Moods As He Readies for Joust

Premier Bennett today was a study in contrasts as he wrapped up details for his five-day joust with the Pearson government at next week's federal-provincial con-ference in Ottawa.

He was in a gay and joking mood while talking with re-porters about such dread possibilities as a "depression"

The premier said this could come if present spiralling costs push prices of exports too high.

"Certainly we (B.C. government) are going to spend money but I've also said we've got a lot of money saved," he pointed out.

Mr. Bennett said the B.C. government's $100 million-plus deposits in various banks "is keeping the banking system going" and acting as one of the main factors combating inflation throughout Canada. ENORMOUS IMPACT

Because deposits are used several times over by the banks in lending money, the premier said the provincial nest eggs fed into the banking system has an enormous impact on the money supply throughout the country.

"The benefits accrue to people who use the banks," he said. "Money would be a lot tighter than it is if it wasn't for our $100 million being.

Churchillian Phrase Brings Guilt Tremors

By Penny Saver

"Some chicken — some neck!" Winston Churchill's famous rallying phrase in the last World War will have a different meaning for me, now that I've met Jane Toms-Smith, an executive of an English cosmetic firm. Jane is here on a trans-Canada tour and her attractive skin is all the proof you need that her products really work! She managed to stir guilt feelings in me, however, when she brought up the subject of women's necks. Like most women who can no longer qualify as "a sweet young thing", I have a neck that could easily double as a chronological truth machine!

Jane came to the rescue by introducing me to one of her company's latest products.

One application and I'm convinced that my neck's appearance will soon be able to catch up with the more pampered skin on my face. Massaged in at night, this cream is a perfect "fairy godmother" to any gal and well worth the $10 investment.

"But," I blubbered in defence, "I'm a busy gal, I don't get much time to fiddle around at the dressing table."

Jane started as a registered nurse and then became a dietician . . . both compromises to her parents' ambition of having her enter medicine. Luckily for lazy women like me, she had a doting grandmother who . . . on the quiet . . . financed Jane through a beauty course. You, too, will be glad she did.

And, like me, you'll be delighted that Jane has decided to visit Canada after having travelled in Australia, South Africa, New Zealand and the United States. With all her enthusiasm for her products, she comes armed with something just as valuable, uine warmth and interest in everyone she meets

Do you want to meet Jane? Give me a call at 382-3131 and I'll put you in touch with her.

Jane also hit my conscience a wallop when she breezily

A WOMAN'S VIEWPOINT

By Pat Dufour

I'm a Calamity Jane . . . every time I'm due to turn up for an important date or party, I seem to be faced with an unscheduled run in my stocking and the necessity to run a four-minute-mile to the nearest womens' store! It does nothing for one's morale to arrive looking as if you've tried to compete with the A-Go-Go set at a Beatles' concert.

The latest fashion news to leak out of a stockholders' meeting of the Beaunit Corporation in New York seems to be designed purely and solely for casualty-prone females like myself.

In this age of canned entertainment, canned beans and caviar, the firm's scientists have decided to go one better and caylar, he him s scienness have decided in 30 one better that can miledy's wardrobe. Mind you, with my luck, I could still find myself stuck with a last-minute gallop to the nearest store. I can imagine nothing more disconcerting than to find that the life-saver can in my office cupboard contains nothing more glamorous than a gealed mess of spaghetti!

What's more, the news release doesn't explain how you spray on the rear of your new carned outlit without a maid in attendance! Clothes closets will have to be well-lighted, too. Otherwise, you may have to juggle quite a few cans before you

How Are You on a Harp?

Not that we have to be too concerned at the present time. The scientists feel that they'll have canned clothes perfected by 2,000 A.D. By then, many of us will only be concerned with draping of a more ethereal nature . . . that is, if we're concerned with clothes at all.

Another prediction is guaranteed to have men-about-town giving wolf-whisties at whistles. Impossible, you say? Ask any of the stockholders who attended that meeting and they'll tell you otherwise. They were treated to a preview of a future when a girl-friend would keep them in a perpetual state of suspense a gir-tucha would keep them in a perpetual state of suspense by wearing a chameleon dress that would change colors at will. It's all done with whiteles, soner whistles, that is. It's too bad that these future wonders aren't available today.

We'd be able to breeze off on holidays with nothing much more

Meanwhile, I'd better rattle this off in a hurry, I'm due at a luncheon in 30 minutes. You guessed it, I'll have to make a quick stop on the way, drat these flimsy pylons, anyway!

Hairdos Tell a Tale

By DINA SUDLOW The little girl who had a little curl right in the middle of her forehead wouldn't believe the things that could happen to her hair. They happened, right before the amazed eyes of a packed audience, Tuesday evening, when Alpha Zeta Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi, sponsored a Storybook of Hair Fashion in

There were hilarious as well as historical moments as model after model stepped out of a huge story book to have curled and pinned hair transformed into the latest of coffure magic... or ladies from days gone by gave a look into the yesterday of hair fashion.

The story opened as the little girl with the curl, Mary Tyrrell turned the first page to show a woman's step, coiffure-wise, from age six to Commentator and co-ordinator Ruth Tyre'll explained how the styles being cut and combed on young models Pat Anderson and Sharon Chamberlain could be modi-fied for school and party wear. Laura-Beth Trail's "Prom do" featured a short hair cut topped with a wiglet set into squares and finished with a bow.

The story progressed to the career girl, showing a basic style for the go-anywhere "Gal Friday," to more elaborate confures for afterfive, using colors and wiglets. One operator "streaked" the hair of model Joan Thompson by combing a blonde wiglet into her dark hair.

Every good book should contain at least one hair-raising experience and this tale was no exception as a frowsy bushy-haired woman burst onto the stage from the audience, demanding a "do," She needed it, and in a matter of 60 seconds, she was whisked behind a screen by an operator, hair and scizzors flew, and she re-appeared, in an exciting cocktail outfit and perfectly coiffed hair to

The next page turned to show gals as they were 10,000 years ago. Milady, in the person of Wendy Mudrak, then donned skins and twisted bones in her tresses to catch her man.

Progressing along in history, Cleopatra, (Joan Thompson) demonstrated that times haven't changed too much in 5,000 years. The gals wore wigs in those days, too but to keep their heads cool. Rosalie Essihos as a Roman empress reminded the audience that high-piled curbs have been "in" for a long time — and that women have been dabbling in the hair color pot for just as long.

Curls and colors were popular in the Elizabethan Age in Britain as Good Queen Bess around the turn of the century preferred to pouff the hair in Sharron Higgins minced down the runway in the short tight curls, headache band Following the west con vonder she could see - her eyelashes were an inch long!

Highpoint of the show was the entrance of Marie Antoin-ette (Nancy Janes) who top-ped her foot-high cofffure, trimmed with pearls and roses, with a ship in full sail. Curls again, History marched forward, through soft curls of the 50s, worn by Maria Knas-man, and the Vidal Sassoon out of the '60s, modelled by Sharon Jensen.

But as every good story should have a climax, the next page was turned for today, as two go-go girls bounced down the runway, followed close behind by Vic-toria's answer to the Beatles, "The Hairbender Trio" as the male stylists donned mop wigs and grabbed guitars to write "The End" to the tale.

Forest Firms Face Tougher Times Ahead

By The Canadian Press

British Columbia's biggest business, the mammoth forest products industry, is in trouble.

A survey made by the Council of 1965's pace and Vancouver of Forest Industries shows 3,000 starts are down 25 per cent.

Housing starts across the housing industry actually decreased by $14,000,000 from the comparable period last year.

"More drastically, trust and mortgage loan companies reduced their funds for shelter financing by $52,000,000", the people have been laid off work as a result of declining markets.

A spokesman for the council said the figure could double between now and the end of November. The 3,000 workers where the spokes were controlled to the controlled to the council said the figure could double between now and the end of November. The 3,000 workers can be about five per cent.

ALARMING DROP

The demand for the province's prime product has drop ped alarmingly because of inflation. Housing starts are down in Canada, the United Kingdom and B.C.'s biggest customer, the United States.

The U.S. housing market is currently undergoing the worst slump since the end of the Second World War.

Construction this year is down 30 per cent from last year's 1.500,000 non-farm unit starts in the U.S. The present rate, up to the end of July, is running at 1,050,000.

Inflation has boosted interest rates south of the border to such a level that even the prime ending institutions are strapped

Inter-Union Fights Not Financed by Fund

The president of the B.C. Federation of Labour said

Wednesday night money from the group's defence fund won't be used in inter-union battles.

E. T. Staley of Victoria said the defence fund was originally used to assist unions on strike but has been expanded this year to carry the fight against injunctions.

But the money has "never been used" to take sides between two unions within the federation or whom one is between two unions within the federation or where one is outside the group.

"It would be improper for us to do so and as long as I am president it will not be used for that purpose," he said He made his comments after one delegate asked if any defence money has been used to help the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers in its battle with the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada at the

The game was duplicate and North and South worked their way to five spades against him. He made his normal opening of the heart queen. South won with dummy's ace, promptly led a club from dummy and stuck, in his nine spot. Our unfortunate friend took his king and led a small trump. South won in his own hand and led a trump to dummy's jack. He looked a trifle disappointed when East showed out but proceeded to lead another club could do about it.

Opening lead—♥ Q and to finesse his ten. Then he played a third round of trumps and continued with the ace of clubs. When this play dropped East's queen South cashed the last club and played the ace and another diamond. West had held onto his king. It would have done him no good to unblock: Then West had to lead a heart. South ruffed in dummy, discarded his last diamond and claimed the balance. What was so unlucky about the hand? South had played the hand very well. He had played to make five and succeeded but that wasn't why we sympathized with poor old West. It seems that most other South players had only eached four spades. Playing at that contract they had simply drawn trumps and gone right after diamonds. That way they set up two diamonds in dummy and avoided all possible unpleasantness in the club suit by eventually discarding two of their clubs on the good diamonds to make

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

If you watch television more than 2,000 hours perear, or are located closer than six feet in any direction, you may face a radiation peril. The view belongs to a former Walt Disney cameraman who accidentally stumbled on to the effects of light on the development of plant life.

John Nash Ott suggested in a story carried by Variety that it is "the re-sponsibility of TV set manufacturers" or other agencies to inform the public of radiation safety standards accepted

Ott is now chairman and execu-Stephen Health and Light Research Institute, Sarasota, Florida

In a presentation this month to delegates at the 100th semi-annual meeting of the Society of Motion Picture and Television Engineers, he outlined his experiments with animals and plants placed in front of a 21The experiments revealed unusual behavior pat-

Ott says international standards for safe-viewing, which manufacturers adhere to by using lead shielding in TV sets, rule out more than 2,000 hours per year of direct viewing . . . also physical presence within

The latter aspect is significant to Ott. He noted that television sets which radiate X-rays and cannot be shielded effectively by anything but lead are often placed against walls. This means occupants of the adoining room may involuntarily be endangered by radia-

According to Ott, autopsies on dead rats showed brain tissue damage. Other animals abruptly experienced marked changes in breeding patterns (producing aller litters).

Ott made a presentation of his findings to the Amerloan Medical Association and he reported strong interest there. He added he has been asked to submit his findings to a White House Conference on Radiation Hazards.

Emily Carr's White Currant Bush Found

Emily Carr's white curran bush has been found.

It is still struggling through the overgrowth just six feet behind the bronze marker that commemorates her biplace at 207 Government St. morates her birth

The bush was found, with some difficulty, by Victoria artist Emily Sartain. She came across it while her Victoria Horticultural Society volunteers were replacing the century-old front garden at the Carr home.

"Her white current bush meant a lot to Emily Carr,' said Miss Sartain.

"They ripened first, before the black and red currents," Emily Carr wrote. "The riper they got, the clearer they grew, till you could almost see right through them . . .

"Oh! you thought, if the currants were just a wee bit clearer, then perhaps you could see them living inside. But nts must be picked while still cloudy . .

OLDHAM, England—Outraged parents protested today that a high school English teacher was taking ex education too far in an essay assignment given to 14-year-old children.

The boys were asked to describe how they would tell their arents if they had go a girl 'in trouble.'

And the girls were asked to describe how they would inorm their parents that they were pregnant. "I'm all for sex education in school," said Mrs. Barbara

NEW YORK-Dr. Benjamin Spock, well-known baby care expert, has expressed limited approval of spanking, but advises parents who were not themselves spanked to find another way of disciplining youngsters.

Parents who escaped spanking and "consider it a slightly rutal thing to do to children" should not spank because it would feel brutal to their children, too," he says.

Adults who encountered spankings when they were grow-ing up "are apt to consider it a quite natural method "and when they then administer it to their children in this spirit, their children accept it as a normal form of discipline," Dr. Spock says. * *

The year in its turning has brought us to the time when a nuisancy but necessary ritual demands attention. This is the winterizing of the family car or cars, and if you neglect it even in our favored clime, you could oil (at least] t hink that's the drill) and slop through until spring. This, for the benefit of has been rive in early January.

There are years when the Victoriano can get by with no more than a change from heavy to light

However, if there's one thing you can't trust in these parts, it's the weather, and I recall sorrowfully a Nov. II when radiator blocks were popping like firecrackers all

Legends of the Night of the Freeze still when the north wind blows.

Once concerns a retired cavalry major of the bulldog breed, who used to urge his Peewit Minor along Oak Bay byways as if riding to hounds. At the first twist of his groping pliers, the major snapped his car' radiator draincock flush with the metal.

Undaunted, he charged indoors to return with a lone, prized bottle of Napoleon brandy, warmed his own interior with a hasty peg, then brimmed his steed's rad with

He muddled through, the story goes . . , but anti-freeze is cheaper.

In theory, a ear's frost plugs — cores of softer metal banged into holes in the engine block — are supposed to pop out as freezing coolant expands, and thus save a neavy repair bill.

In practice, this prudent in practice, this princelle safeguard doesn't seem to work very well, and the only frost plug I ever popped left me stalled in a cloud of steam on a sizzling June highway.

The failure struck me as singularly unjust, since I begin my own car winterizing about as early as one can. First step is to see that the car's exterior finish is adequately protected from winter's ravages. Some car-owners use a wax but that calls for hard rubbing, which in turn can lead to a painful affliction called bursitis. That comes from too much friction of bone in socket, and I know a fellow who waved himself up such a case that for a week after, he screamed like a wildcat each time he bent an elbow,

With this in mind, let 123 recommend the system I used with my last car, a gutless wonder with a mouse-fur interior and elastic band shock absorbers, which we bought on impulse and learned to hate in something under a week.

From May onward, I would let a patina of traffic film build on its hide. By October, this amounted to an opaque glaze, which before the first frost was topped with an even coating of mud.

Come spring, the paint-job which we didn't much care protected that finicky strollers could scarce finger-scrawl a Wash your car' on its flanks. Around April, the boys at the corner garage lured me in on the pretext that Old Unfaithful needed an oil change and gave her a free wash just to see what was

What they found cowering there impressed them not at all, and I was able to com-mence my next winterizing campaign with no further interference.

It's years since we unloaded that lemon, but even now, when we see it snuffling and oking along the streets, I feel like hurling rocks at it.

We like the car that succeeded it much better, even though it has had its little troubles, and its winterizing is coming along very nicely.

It has a bellyful of approved SAE 30 oil (or is it 20?), a generous gulp of non-alcoholic anti-freeze, and if it behaves till the next three zeros are framed in its mileage indicator, I may treat it to a pair of snow tires.

After all, what better way to guarantee a green winter?

As He Readies for Joust

Premier Bennett today was a study in contrasts as he wrapped up details for his five-day joust with the Pearson government at next week's federal-provincial conference in Ottawa. He was in a gay and joking mood while talking with re-porters about such dread possibilities as a "depression" in the economy.

The premier said this could come if present spiralling costs push prices of exports too high.

"But we're not going into one (depression) if they follow my advice," he said.

He was referring to his appeals to the community at large to "show restraint" in spending, borrowing, profits

Mr. Bennett added the federal government to the list of groups he is lecturing, urging it to be tough in dealing with postal employees' SHOWN RESTRAINT

"We (B.C. government) have shown restraint by example, not just talking words," he said.

A moment later, he said his announced intention to de-mand huge federal grants now so that the Alaska Highway on that the Alaska Highway can be paved and the Pacific Creat Eastern Railway ex-tended to the Alaska border were "sound policies" even during the present economic

"Certainly we (B.C. govern ment) are going to spend money but I've also said we've got a lot of money saved," he pointed out.

Mr. Bennett said the B.C. government's $100 million-plus deposits in various banks "is keeping the banking system going" and acting as one of the main factors combating inflation throughout Canada. ENORMOUS IMPACT

Because deposits are used several times over by the banks in lending money, the premier said the provincial nest eggs fed into the banking system has an enormous impact on the money supply throughout the country.

"The benefits accrue people who use the banks," he said. "Money would be a lot tighter than it is if it wasn't for our $100 million being available."

The sort of bite that sets postmen's teeth on edge
Following the publication of posties' working conditions a report which advocated dog repellants for the men in blue Victoria mailmen today unleashed their own feelings on the local doggie set. After several years pounding the letter-box beat, John Wootten knows just what it feels like to be on the

"It sounds funny now," he said. "But it wasn't so funny at the time.' Veteran Jim White has been bitten more times than he cares to remember after 20 years in the business -- and not always on the rear.

"Dogs are crafty little beggars," he says with an air of authority. "They'll wait be-side the mail slot. Then, when you put your fingers through to stuff the letters in they'll take a bite."

Jim has scars to prove it. Not all doggy meetings end

. Jim recalls one man who was knocked down and sat upon by a six-month old Great

"He was literally pinned to the ground until the dog's owner came and rescued with dogs.

On the rural beat one day Al Nicholson was bitten by a horse which took a sudden dislike to him.

Lloyd Drynell had problems keeping a goat from entering his van each time he called at a certain farmhouse. .

And Jim Spencer chased out of a backyard by a hissing gander. But probably most upset man on the whole force was Kelly Barter the day he first donned a uniform. Returning home after a bite free day, he was set upon by his own pet dog. Apart from the man who had to jump on a moving bread van and the one who barricaded himself in a neigh-bor's house, the postman's lot incessive washed clothing and linens, you are missing an important benefit.

An automatic clothes dryer is also a quick valet service—a great help in keeping clothes neat and fresh-looking while outting down on dry cleaning.

This service is particularly handy when caring for children's school wear. To steam out wrinkles in wool skirts, dresses, slacks and jackets—place garments in dryer along with two damp bath towels. Tumble for about five minutes.

Tumble for about five minutes.

Hang on a non-rust hanger until thoroughly dry. A quick touchup with the iron may be needed.

The same method can be used to raise the nap on corduroy velvet and velveteen. Corduroy is very popular for school wear. It is hard wearing and can be kept fresh as new when automatically cared for.

Synthetic fibre sweaters dry soft, fast and fluffy in the dryer. Prehe at tor several minutes, then place several bath towels inside to cushion tumbling action. Remove sweaters as soon as drying action stops. balance in the Lowman system until nature gets things straightened out.

The age at which women have menopause varies greatly. About 50 per cent of women in western civilization experience this change-over between the ages of 45 and 50, 25 per cent ages of 45 and 50, 25 per cent between 40 and 45, 12½ per cent after the age of 50 and 12½ per cent after the age of 50 and 12½ per cent before the age of 40.

There is no way to predict when this will occur. Heredity may play a part. A woman may follow the pattern of her mother and sisters, although this is not always the case by any means. It appears probable that a woman who has her first period early may have a late menopause, but there is no set rule. Only about 10 per cent of women have mo symptoms at all while another 10 per cent of women have mo symptoms at all while another 10 per cent of women have mo symptoms at all while another 10 per cent of women have mo symptoms at all while another 10 per cent of women have more varied and severe symptoms. Johnson Leaves With Country In His Pocket

CANBERRA. Australia-Fresh from a triumphal capture of New Zealand President Johnson jetted in here tonight to try an Australian encore.

Six times in 20 minutes he stopped his cavalcade to shake hands with the crowds that lined the route. Six times the crowds surged around him cheering him on, singing for he's

Six times he talked to them over the bull horn about friendship, unity and the greatness of Asian togetherness Said Prime Minister Harold Holt who accompanied him:

"I'm so glad you are not running as prime minister here." Then Johnson disappeared into the governor general's residence leaving a crowd of anti-war demonstrators waiting his arrival in the cold outside his hotel.

With Johnson absent it was hard to assess just how serious the picketers were. They carried signs ranging all the way from "more hus bands for unmarried mothers" to "LBJ is a murderer." Local security officials regarded many as students "out for a lark." However they admitted the issue of drafting Australians Viet Nam war has become a major issue in the elections due next month.

Johnson arrived here with New Zealand in his pocket

Smothers Any Opposition

In one whirlwind day of triumph in New Zealand he smothered any opposition that might have been and left the country panting almost breathlessly that it was all the way

After being exposed to the folksy Texan even his opponents had to gasp their admiration and up to a point agree It was a day tailor-made to the Johnson approach. The w Zealand sun shone. The sky was blue. The kids were out of school. And LBJ in his best election campaign mood made the most of it. The biggest crowds in New Zealand history turned out to see him surpassing even royal visits.

"If Canada would not replace this constant imitation with a dynamic move back to free enterprise, replace our inferior ity complex with optimism and pride, replace our position on the socialistic breadline with desire, vigorous idealism, and extreme hard work, then we could create a nation the envy of the world."

Profits Will Be Cut

OTTAWA)CP)-The CPR said today it expects its profits to be reduced if the government's 29214-1/2 proposed transportation bill is 3021/2 enacted in its present form, eliminating railway subsidies

In a brief to the Commons transport committee, the railway said part of the problem ductions in the subsidy pay-ments and a longer period of time for elimination of them. The bill would provide $110,-000,000 to the railways in the first year — the same amount now being paid. This would be reduced by $14,000,000 a year until reaching zero.

"After making allowance for dditional revenues from freight traffic and the reduction in operating costs resulting from increased efficiency, we anticipate a deterioration in our net earnings in the first year after enactment of the bill," the CPR brief said.

"This situation can be expected to worsen in subsequent

A TWO-DOLLAR HAIR-CUT FOR $1.75 CUT FOR $1.75

One reason why the price of a haircut was raised to $2.00 recently is the fact that most harbershops have too much tide, time. We have cut our idle time to the hare minimum by our haircuts-by-appointment system. To cut out the last bit of it, we offer the following: If you make your appointment AT LEAST one day in advance, you get a twodollar haircut for, $1.75.
